10. Plaintiff Frank Dale Jenkins claims to have suffered the following injuries as a result of the administration of NECC's drug:

Two weeks after receiving his last injection of methylprednisolone acetate, Mr. Jenkins began experiencing symptoms of meningitis, including, but not limited to, headaches, neck pain, shoulder pain, and nausea. Subsequently, on or about October 3, 2012 Mr. Jenkins received a telephone call informing him that the steroid injections he had received came from one of the three lots of contaminated methylprednisolone acetate that NECC recalled in late September 2012.

Upon reporting symptoms consistent with meningitis, Mr. Jenkins was ordered to report to his local emergency room for further assessment. On October 3, 2012, Mr. Jenkins was hospitalized and began treatment for meningitis. On that date, Mr. Jenkins underwent various medical tests, including a painful lumbar puncture procedure to determine if he had meningitis. In fact, it took physicians several attempts in order to obtain cerebrospinal fluid from Mr. Jenkins. The lumbar puncture found signs of meningitis. As a result, Mr. Jenkins was treated for meningitis with a series of antifungal medications and antibiotics.

11. Plaintiff, Frank Dale Jenkins, claims to have suffered the following damages as a result of the administration of NECC's drug: Plaintiff seeks relief for mental, emotional, and physical damages as a result of being treated with NECC's contaminated steroid injection. As a direct result of being injected with contaminated doses of methylprednisolone acetate, Plaintiff suffered injuries, conscious pain and suffering, emotional distress, loss of enjoyment of life and other damages.

Plaintiff, Betty Jenkins, experienced a great deal of emotional pain, anxiety, including loss of consortium as a result of watching her once active husband, Mr. Jenkins, regress from experiencing symptoms of meningitis, to hospitalization, to undergoing intense medical treatment, to having a diminished quality of life.

12. Plaintiffs reserve the right to amend this Complaint to add allegations and claims against individuals or entities currently omitted (in light of the Court's order permitting a Master Complaint naming defendants affiliated with NECC and currently participating in mediation by December 20) and to add or amend allegations against Defendants named herein based, in part, on further discovery.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiffs demand Judgment against the Defendants awarding compensatory damages, punitive damages, attorneys' fees, interest, cost of suit, and such further relief as the Court deems equitable and just.
